Very Big Handkerchief
Mr. Frederick Wile, the author of that much-discussed book, "Men Around the Kaiser," tells some excellent stories about a number of well-known Germans.

Dr. Paul Ehrlich, the famous scientist, had a habit in his younger days, says Mr. Wile, of collecting any pieces of old linen he found about the house with which to clean his scientific instruments, his microscopic slides, and so on. Cast-off shirts and old handkerchiefs were his specialties, and he used to stuff them all into his capacious pockets so as to have them handy whenever he required them.

At a public lecture one hot day Dr. Ehrlich perspired freely, and, wanting to mop his brow, he put his hand into the nearest pocket and crumpled what he thought to be a handkerchief. He tugged and tugged, and it came out and came out until he had exposed to the full view of his astonished audience a complete nightgown belonging to his wife—Pearson's Weekly.

Tree Earns $3,205.
What is probably the most valuable tree in the world is an alligator pear tree at Whittier, Cal., which netted its owner a profit of $3,205 in one year. This tree was planted in 1905 and began bearing in its fourth year. In 1912 it bore 3,000 pears, which sold for $1,500, while the sale of buds during the same year amounted to $1,705, making the total given above. The tree is a seedling, the seed having been planted with a quantity of other seed which had been imported, presumably from Mexico. Another tree which was planted at the same time, and which stands close to this phenomenal bearer, has never borne more than 50 pears in a season. This valuable tree is now protected by a high fence built on an octagonal plan. The pears weigh from eight to twelve ounces each.

It is a common thing in this country to see whole families growing up with nervous systems weakened by coffee drinking.

"There are five children in my family," writes an Iowa mother, "all of whom drank coffee from infancy up to two years ago."

"My husband and I had heart trouble and were advised to quit coffee. We did so and began to use Postum. We now are doing without medicine and are entirely relieved of heart trouble. (Caffeine causes heart trouble when continually used as in coffee drinking.)"

"Our eleven-year-old boy had a weak digestion from birth, and yet always craved and was given coffee. When we changed to Postum he liked it and we gave him all he wanted. He has been restored to health by Postum and still likes it."

New York—Broadway is full of rich men's sons after dark every night. That is why Broadway keeps the lamps lit. That is also why a minister said the other day:

"God save New York from this plague of rich men's sons."

But if all the rich men's sons were like the heirs of two of America's greatest fortunes, Broadway would be in the clutch of the bailiffs in a month.

The Astor money and the Harriman money is never heard on Broadway—and there is nothing noisier than a young man spending his first million. Pink lamp shades and a waiter in black and white over the left shoulder and a French chauffeur in front do not interest William Vincent Astor of William Averill Harriman.

They are not dusty serious all the time, of course. No youngster of twenty-two is. If he is, it is a signal to call on the family physician. And they not only have gumption and industry, but a practical interest in the great civic problems of the day.

MENACE OF BENCH

English Judge an Example of Un-curbed Judicial Power.

Jeffries Was Infamous—Dearly Loved to Talk and Took Delight in Tortures He Inflicted Upon All the Court.

London.—There is no better source of "human interest" stories than an old law book. Though centuries have passed since the quaint, stiff phrases on the yellow edged pages were warm breath in the mouths of living men, the great human tragedy as tragedy and as comic then as now, "Take Corbett's State Trials," for instance. It was printed only a little over a century ago, but contains reports of proceedings from the earliest period of the English courts.

The infamous Judge Jeffries presided over the trials reported in volume 10, 1680 to 1685, and it is a sickening record. Under the bloodthirsty laws of that time, an unjust judge could commit atrocities such as we can hardly bring ourselves to read of nowadays. There are pages of dialogue in the old law books, however, where tragedy hides for a moment behind roaring farce, and we forget our horror while we gasp and stare and laugh at the extraordinary antics which a man, insane with power, could descend to.

Jeffries evidently liked his job, for one thing. The ancient and dignified Court of Kings's Bench was to him simply the place where nobody could keep him from doing as he pleased. He liked to talk, to contradict people, to bully them, to scare them, to lecture them, to get even with those against whom he had a grudge; and the bench was his chance.

Entirely characteristic was his response to poor Joseph Hayes, charged with high treason on the back of a letter which he insisted he never wrote, and who asked for counsel, objecting to certain questions. "You are under a mistake; somebody has put it into your head and puffed you up with a vain story; there is no such thing, it is a fiction, a mere whim, only said by Mr. Sidney and no ground in the world for it!" exploded the judge.

Hayes meekly but unwisely ventured to inquire: "Was it not so in the case of my Lady Carr? There is a record of that, I suppose?"

"It was not so. Don't talk of it; there was no such thing at all!" the court snapped.

Hayes' persistence in this matter was particularly unwise because he was right as to the record. Nothing made Judge Jeffries madder than to be opposed by somebody who was in the right. He was evidently still peeved when, a little later, Hayes again raised some point of evidence and asked for counsel.

"No!" roared his lordship. "It is an idle whim, and I would fain know the counsel that put that foolish notion into your head."

"If you will allow me counsel," pleads Hayes, desperately, "you shall hear who they are; I have been told the law is so."

"We are of another opinion," observes Judge Jeffries grandly. "If any whimsical notions are put into you by some enthusiastic counsel, the court is not to take notice of their crochets."

"I am not a man of that quality," protests Hayes, later, "to give Sir T. A. 150 guineas." And then the court had its chance.

"We all know you have been a very active man, a busy fellow about the city; as forward a spark as any I know of a great while. I don't know what you talk of your quality, but we know your qualifications; you have always been factious and turbulent against the king and government."

One trouble with Judge Jeffries was that he wanted to be the whole show—judge, jury, attorney, complainant, witness and everything else. He evidently would have liked to be the executioner, too, judging from the relish with which he dwelt on the punishments it was in his power to inflict.

Right Eye Offends and Pennsylvania Gouges Out Member With a Fork.

Greensburg, Pa.—Obeying the Biblical injunction, "If thine eye offend, then pluck it out," John Linardos of Greensburg, Pa., took a tablefork and gouged out the offending member. Linardos' case is one of the strangest on record in the United States. His family and friends declare that, until he followed the bent of his belief, he had no peace day or night. Since his chasteing act they declare he is a much better man.

Linardos was in Detroit, Mich., when he gouged the eye out. He had been sent west in the hope that a change of association might cause him to forget his hallucination. Contrary to their expectation, however, his change of residence had the opposite effect. As the same sights presented themselves to him in Detroit as had in Greensburg he plucked the eye out.

While Linardos never was given to riotous living or immoral conduct, he some time ago confided to his friends in Greensburg that he believed himself to be a wicked man because he had not made a more careful study of the scriptures. After a time Linardos fell into brooding over this lack 383 No. Union St., Aurora, Ill.—"My ailment started with a little pimple and it always itched and burned terribly. I scratched it and in a few days my face was all covered with sores. I couldn't go to bed, being afraid of getting the clothing all soiled, although I had my face all bandaged."

"I was given two jars of salve but it kept getting worse. It was something like a running sore because every time I used some of the salve I had to wrap bandages around my neck to keep the water and pus from running down my body. I wrote for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few days I received these and washed my face with the Cuticura Soap and put on some Cuticura Ointment and the next morning my face felt cool and somewhat relieved. After using the sample I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I followed this treatment just twenty-six days and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was cured." (Signed) George Miller, Jan. 1, 1913.

Then He Pulled Him Out.
Chancellor David Lloyd-George, one of the best known figures in England, tells this story at his own expense: "A man saved some one from drowning and was given a public testimonial. When, after the mayor had sung the man's praises, he was called upon to reply, he said: 'Really, I have done nothing to deserve this reward. I saw the man struggling in the water, and as no one else was near by I saw he would be drowned if I didn't save him. So I jumped in, swam to him, turned him over to see that it wasn't Lloyd-George, and then pulled him out.'"

ANOTHER GOOD YEAR IN WESTERN CANADA

MANITOBA, SASKATCHEWAN AND ALBERTA HAVE SPLENDID CROPS.

The results of the threshing throughout Western Canada shows a more wonderful yield than usual of wheat, oats, barley and flax, all of which was harvested and threshed in perfect order. Not only was the average yield excellent over the entire country, but the quality was of the highest standard. Without going into figures, it is sufficient to say that wheat graded almost universally very near the top. Reports are to hand showing yields of wheat from many fields which averaged forty bushels per acre, and weighing 65 pounds to the measured bushel. Oats were very heavy, running from fifty to one hundred and fifteen bushels to the acre. Barley also was a very heavy yielder and kept up the reputation of Western Canada as a producer of that cereal.

In many parts of the country the yield of flax exceeded the earlier expectations, but in other parts, there was some loss on account of winds blowing off the boll. Hundreds of farmers who have only been in the country three or four years, with but little means when they arrived, will, out of the crop of this year, clean up all their indebtedness, and be able to put something aside for further improvements on their farms and homes which are now freed of incumbrance. The writer has just heard of the experience of a man in the Battleford district that is worth repeating. He went to the district seven or eight years ago, with no money, worked for a time, got a team of horses, did some ploughing and homesteaded a quarter section of land. He now owns 450 acres of land, clear of all incumbrances, and has wheat, oats, barley and hay, as well as a good number of horses, cattle and hogs, feeding rough grain to the stock. He is a firm believer in mixed farming. The fifty dollars that he first earned in the country has now increased to $25,000. He has never had a crop failure. Instances of this kind could be repeated over and over again.

There is a Dane, named Key, east of Saskatoon, whose oats this year went 110 bushels to the acre, and his wheat 40 bushels. He has paid off the mortgage on his farm, and now contemplates a trip to Denmark, to visit his old home. He has no more cares or worries, but is anxious to have more of his people settle in that part. It is not only the farmer with limited means and small area of land who is doing well, and has done wonderfully in Western Canada this year, but the man with means, the man who is able to conduct successful farming on a large scale and many opportunities offer for such in Western Canada, also has increased his bank account handsomely. A farmer in Southern Alberta raised 350,000 bushels of grain in 1913, and made almost a fortune out of it. In Saskatchewan and in Manitoba is to be heard the same story of what has been done by the farmer working a large area, which he is able to do successfully, by the use of improved farm machinery, enabling him to cut hundreds of acres a day, and plow the land immediately with large traction outfits. No better recommendation could be given the country than the fact that during the past year, upwards of 400,000 settlers arrived in Canada, the greater number of whom went to the farm. There are still many thousands of homesteads still available, capable of producing such crops and maintaining such herds as has made rich men out of the thousands whose experiences could be reproduced were it necessary.—Advertisement.

35 Bushels Per Acre
Was the yield of wheat on many farms in Western Canada in 1913, some yields being reported as high as fifty bushels per acre.

As high as one hundred bushels were reported in some districts for oats, fifty bushels for barley, and from ten to twenty bushels for flax.

J. Keys arrived in the country five years ago from Denmark, with very little means. He homesteaded, worked hard, is now the owner of 300 acres of land, in 1913 had a crop of 200 acres, which will realize him about four thousand dollars. His wheat weighed 68 pounds to the bushel and averaged over 55 bushels to the acre.

Thousands of similar instances might be related of the homesteaders in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The crop of 1913 was an abundant one everywhere in Western Canada.
